POLICY ON RANGE USE

Montanan Addresses Governors' Conference on the Public Domain Question Since the Advent of the Foresters—Administration of the Reserves

Salt Lake City, June 7.—"Our National Policy as to the Use of the Public Range," was the subject of an address by Governor Stewart of Montana before the Conference of Western Governors here today. Referring to the lack of any settled policy in dealing with the public ranges of the west until recent years, Governor Stewart said that very lack of any policy had done much to promote the upbuilding of the nation.

"While Uncle Sam sat with his feet crossed on his desk," said Governor Stewart, "and advised the pioneers and rangers to help themselves—and they did help themselves—with freedom and self-liberty—that same elongated Uncle Sam winked his weather eye and pretended not to see, because he knew that the production of great herds augmented his wealth and promoted his prosperity." He knew that a homesteader, a cowboy or a flockmaster who was willing to leave civilization and bury himself in the solitude of the plains or mountain fastness ought to have every encouragement that a beneficent nation could extend to him. Knowing this, nothing was done to administer the ranges.

Adverting to the time when the national government first took any interest in the open range, the speaker said it was a few years ago, when large operators began fencing the public domain and monopolizing its use. Then the forest reserves appeared and with the advent of the forester there was inaugurated with in the reserves a system of range regulation that has worked out with some degree of satisfaction.

Administration of Ranges. "Having had an opportunity to observe the administration of ranges within forest reserves," said the governor, "I am still undecided as to the merits of the system. With a fair degree of liberality and a goodly portion of common sense and old-fashioned honesty actuating an official, I would say the system is first class; but with a predominance of narrow-minded bureaucracy and inflated conceit in the foreground it certainly is bad. In the early days of the forest service, we had the latter characteristics too much in evidence. The result was friction and disagreement with settlers and a consequent bad reputation for the system and the service. All these things seem to be improving, and today I know of districts so satisfactorily administered that a suggestion of a return to the old methods would elicit prompt and forceful remonstrance.

"The old range question, that which pertains to the lands outside the forest reserves, is solving itself by the process of absorption. No extensive areas of open range exist today outside of the forest reserves. The homesteader, the dry land farmer and the stockman (using fenced lands) have brought about this situation. The public range, like the true pioneer, disappears before the march of civilization.

"Some there are who bemoan the loss of the public lands, and who decry the liberality with which our government was wont to deal with homesteaders, not realizing that homesteaders are home builders. As we look at the question in the light of results as they show today, we are able to say with pride that while the government was liberal, it has been most liberally rewarded. The herds followed the trails of the first pioneers, the ranchman went with the herds, and the farmer, desiring a greater return for his labor, followed the ranchman; then came the town builders, the railroads and the industries incident to a thorough-going civilization, until today we have a land that is the wonder and the admiration of the world—a new land, a young land, whose achievements are phenomenal, and whose possibilities are almost unbelievable."

BOY DISAPPEARS FROM HIS HOME

Believing that Willie Price, 16 years old, has been stricken with the "back to the soil" fever, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Price have been canvassing the farming districts since the boy left his home, 545 Twenty-first street, on Monday and has not been heard of since. The boy became interested in farming through reading several books on the subject and had often pleaded to be permitted to go to California.

"I'm going out to hunt for a job. Don't worry, I'll be back tonight," said Willie on Monday and since making his goodbye remarks, he has been missing. On Tuesday it was reported that the boy had gone to Farmington with a farmer, Mrs. William Burt, his aunt, canvassed the Farmington farms without tracing the wanderer.

His capital upon leaving home was $1.10.

FEAR ONE-MAN FILIBUSTERING

Washington, June 7.—Members of the senate, fearing that the one-man filibuster inaugurated by Senator Jones of Washington may delay the work of that branch of congress, labored with him today to abandon it. The Washington senator is filibustering with him today to abandon it. The Washington senator is filibustering in protest against the refusal of the Democratic caucus to grant the minority members an additional clerk. He announced his intention today to come and hear our message; the pastor seeks to uplift the ideals and aspirations of humanity.

Threats and cajolery alike appeared to have little influence on Senator Jones. He insisted that he would renew his fight when the senate reconvenes and that he would follow the tactics he employed yesterday and on the preceding days when he showed no mercy and played no favorites. He objected yesterday wherever the constitution, the rules and the presiding officer permitted the technical introduction of bills and resolutions and to the consideration of others. He resorted five times to the call for a quorum and senators busy with committee work or otherwise engaged were forced to enter the chamber and record their presence. The members of the tariff sub-committee, striving with all its might to finish the schedules assigned to it, recessed again and again. Most of the senate is taking the filibuster philosophically, although majority "whips" Senator J. Hamilton Lewis is unhappy in his role of the dove of peace.

THOUGHT THE GOVERNOR DEAD

Chicago, June 7.—A breathless, perspiring friend of Lieutenant Governor O'Hara's appeared yesterday at the hearing of the senate welfare committee, and asserted he had some important information to impart. The lieutenant governor stepped outside the room.
"Mr. O'Hara," said the man, "if you get the power will you appoint me on the commission?" naming a well paying state office.
"The governor appoints the man who fills that place; I have nothing to do with it," O'Hara replied.
"But if you do get the power, do I get the job?"
"Well, yes, but it's foolish to discuss it."
"Hooray!" said the visitor. "I've got it. It's said, but Governor Dunne dropped dead a few minutes ago."
Mr. O'Hara at once telephoned to the capitol and learned that the governor was in excellent health. The rumor was traced to a stick-ticker which announced the death of a politician, his recent appointment by Governor Dunne—the sentence ending with the cause of death.

RATINGS OF WAR VESSELS PRACTICE

Washington, June 7.—The individual ratings of the war vessels in practice were made public today by the navy department. The cruiser Maryland, with a merit percentage of 89.32 per cent, attained first place among the vessels, according to Lieutenant Commander T. T. Craven, director of target practice and engineering competitions. The Minnesota finished nineteenth and last with a standing of 32.371.
The four vessels next to the Maryland and their standing were: the Rhode Island, 77.97; Idaho, 76.35; Virginia, 71.952; New Hampshire, 64.074.
"The scores this spring are materially higher than those of last year in practically all forms of target practice," said Commander Craven. "This improvement is due to the establishment of definite schedules for progressive training, permitting better preparations for the various exercises. The performance of the older ships has been particularly gratifying."
